COVID 19 PRACTICES

It is the duty of every organization to protect the health and safety of its employees.

COVID-19 spreads through close contact with an infected person and contaminated surfaces. We at BC Livestock must educate our customers, our employees and the visitors to our facilities on the symptoms and the basic precautions to prevent the spread of infections.

COVID-19 symptoms are similar to that of colds and flus, and the severity can vary depending on the individual. These symptoms can be take up to 14 days to appear, and include fever, coughing, difficulty breathing and pneumonia (in severe cases).

Upon entering any of our facilities, please make use of the hand sanitizing stations before you proceed.

Any producer, buyer, employee or customer that has recently been in contact with an individual who has been confirmed positive, must self quarantine for 14 days and is not permitted to come to any BC Livestock yards while under quarantine. If our employee has symptoms at any time during this period, the self-quarantine period may be extended. Please refer to the BCL RTW practices for self isolating employees.

BC Livestock requires all employees that are sick to stay at home: if you are over 60 years old, have a compromised immune system or had a high chance of being exposed to COVID-19, please take all the proper precautions and do not come to work if not absolutely necessary. This pertains to any and all that would like to attend any of our auctions or visit our facilities.

Under Work Safe BC legislation, all workers have the right to refuse work if they feel an aspect of their workplace is “likely to endanger” their health or safety. Employees who fear exposure to COVID-19 in their workplace may refuse work in reference to this legislation.

Please note that the COVID-19 pandemic is an ever-changing global event which may impact the stance of the Government of Canada and the Regional Health Authority, thus updates will be provided when new information is made available.

BC Livestock is committed to following the Provincial Health Guidelines and Worksafe BC Regulations regarding the COVID-19 Pandemic, please work with us to keep a healthy and safe environment for our staff.

Thank you.
