Current Market

Last week Pfizer came out with their announcement that clinical trials have shown their vaccine is 95% effective, and this week Moderna also came out with data, showing theirs is 94.5% effective. Both of these announcements are bolstering the markets being that there's now optimism that within the first quarter of 2021, life is going return to normal. In the short term, we are seeing a little bit of panic buying in the USA, with fears of city centres, shops etc being shut down in an effort to contain Covid-19 until these vaccines can be deployed. This in turn, is driving up the finished price for fat cattle and trickling down to feeders, which is the reason we have seen all feeder cattle prices up across the board this week.
