CURRENT MARKET REPORT

Corn exports to China from the USA hit weekly lows not seen since February 2013, due to the recent hurricane season in the gulf. Cattle markets have been incredibly stable considering the recent stochastic trend in the cattle futures the last two weeks, mainly a major downtrend as money managers continue to pull money out of their long positions and take on some short positions. Harvest is in full swing with more silage than expected and some grain crops not making market quality, is also lending support to the calf market. Stay tuned to your local markets as it will continue to be a bumpy ride throughout the fall, and always remember, nothing replaces true market transparency like selling at a live cattle auction where anyone can step into the ring and bid on your livestock!
