Current Market Report

Feeder cattle remain steady to strong with the weight groups from 550 to under 800 pounds reverting back to the levels we started the quarter with in January and February. If the grass man is on cattle being offered for sale, the price can pick up $0.10 a pound easily, but if those cattle are going to the feedlot where the costs are much higher, you will see a steady market. Receipts have been huge at the local markets as of late, but as numbers dry up, you will most likely see a slight pick-up in feeder prices; this is also dependent on several other factors as I have discussed in previous reports. The cow and bull trade is still at a feverish level, with bulls bringing $1.25-$1.30 for the right kind, and cows up to $1.15. I see this trend most likely continuing right into late summer and early fall, assuming no major macro-economic events derail this train. Forward contracts continue to be hot for yearlings but they might be egg on the faces of those who don't run risk management right through to the end stage, as they make zero sense at the moment for those paying up for delivery in the 4th quarter. Don't forget our Kamloops equipment sale coming up this Saturday, May 14. There are a lot of excellent items!
